GR 234 Zuera

El GR 234 "Camino de la Jorgeada" es un sendero que enlaza en tres etapas la plaza del Pilar de Zaragoza con la ermita de San Jorge, en Huesca, uniendo en un recorrido norte-sur, o viceversa, las dos capitales provinciales. En sus 76 kilómetros discurre por pistas de tierra, caminos y antiguas cabañas, atravesando los municipios de Zaragoza, Villanueva de Gállego, Zuera, Gurrea de Gállego, Almudévar y Huesca.

Este sendero sigue los pasos de la tradicional andada popular entre Zaragoza y Huesca que, desde 2002, organiza cada 23 de abril la Asociación Deportiva Os Andarines d'Aragón. Es una marcha en la que participan cientos de senderistas celebrando el patrón de Aragón, San Jorge.

GR 234 "Camino de la Jorgeada" is a footpath that links in three stages the Pilar Square of Zaragoza with San Jorge Hermitage, in Huesca, uniting in a north-south - or vice-versa - route, the two provincial capitals. In its 76 kilometers it runs through dirt trails, roads and old livestock trails crossing through the municipalities of Zaragoza, Villanueva de Gállego, Zuera, Gurrea de Gállego, Almudévar and Huesca.

This footpath follows the steps of the traditional popular andada (walk) between Zaragoza and Huesca that, since 2002, the Sports Association Os Andarines d'Aragón organizes every April 23rd. It is a walk in which hundreds of hikers participate celebrating the patron saint of Aragón, San Jorge.

From the municipal pavilion of Zuera, GR 234 continues through the River Park to the sports zone and the adjoining park. On arriving at the banks of the Gállego, it crosses the bridge over the river on the pedestrian crossing of the old road, and approaches the district of Las Galias. A dirt path follows the motorway by the side of the river. Parallel to it, it crosses again, in alignment with N-330, and flanks the industrial park of Los Llanos de la Estación. GR 234, always in form of a trail, crosses the railway and faces the great plain northwards, through crop fields.

Running parallel to the elevated irrigation canal of Santa Quiteria, it reaches Caseta de Valero, a strategic place in the popular walk of La Jorgeada. The road continues parallel to the motorway and the railway. In the distance, La Violada Hermitage can be seen; now near the small Huesca locality of San Jorge. In the vicinity of La Venta de la Violada it links with La Cañada Real de Lupiñén, which leads directly through crop fields to Almudévar. The entrance to Almudévar occurs after crossing the Monegros Canal, next to an eye-catching cruise ship.

From the municipal pavilion of Zuera, GR 234 heads south, toward the cemetery. After the roundabout of entrance to Zuera, the footpath seeks a trail to the right, behind the industrial park, on which a livestock trail runs. Camino de la Jorgeada will follow the livestock trail, parallel to the national road, on its left bank. During this stretch of the route, a series of old beekeeping constructions can be seen recessed in very rudimentary walls, while offering good views of the Gállego Valley and of the locality of San Mateo in the distance. Past the Las Lomas del Gállego, the wide road crosses the river and heads toward Villanueva de Gállego. After leaving this locality, a series of farm trails run under the river terrace where San Jorge University is situated. At its end, the footpath enters San Juan de Mozárifar. The wide trail of Camino del Cascojo leads to San Gregorio. Before arriving at this locality, an embankment trail (Camino de Corbera Alta) makes it possible to go around this rural district, running by the Rabal irrigation canal, to the old flour mill of Camino de los Molinos. The urban route through Zaragoza then starts, finishing in the Plaza del Pilar.
